

What your customers say when no brand is listening

People on Reddit are talking to each other, not pitching a brand or answering a survey. Nobody is performing for an audience. That is what makes this language worth quoting, and why it reads nothing like a Semrush report or a focus group transcript.

We turn that discussion into a research report. Pain points, what people actually want, and why they hesitate to buy, every line backed by a real quote. Add your logo and send it to your client as your own work.

What's in the report

- Pain points, ranked by how often they actually came up
- What customers wish existed, in their own words
- Why people hesitate to buy, including past bad experiences
- A short section at the end on what this means for strategy

Where the data comes from

We research public discussion on Reddit. Every quote in the report links straight to the original comment, so nothing is made up and nothing is paraphrased.

Pricing and turnaround

Plan	What you get	Price	Turnaround
Single report	One product category	Rs 8,000	48 to 72 hours
Category pack	Three reports	Rs 20,000	One every two days
Monthly plan	Three reports a month priority turnaround	Rs 28,000	Ongoing

Every plan is white-labeled. Your logo, your brand colors, ready to forward as your own work.

Categories shift. A new competitor enters, a brand reformulates, an influencer controversy changes what people trust. The monthly plan re-reads the category on a schedule so you catch that shift instead of pitching on six-month-old assumptions.

How it works

1. Tell us the product category and which communities to research, or let us pick them
2. We pull the discussion and read through it ourselves
3. You get a finished report with your branding, every quote checked and every link real
4. Send it to your client or drop it into your proposal

Attached is a sample report on whey protein, built the same way your client's report would be.
